WHITE OAK SUGGESTION—Emmett R. Posey, above, first shift carding department, White Oak Plant, was recently given a cash award from Cone Mills Corporation, for suggesting a steel brace to hold the doors of the vacuum tanks closed when the supporting bolts pull loose. This safety suggestion also eliminates a constant maintenance problem. This is Mr. Posey's second suggestion that paid off.

Camp Herman Recreation Center To Be Used For Junior Citizens' Camp

The request of Central YMCA camp committee to use the facilities of Camp Herman Recreation Center for their Junior Citizens' Camp four or five weeks next summer was granted by the Cone Memorial YMCA board of directors at the meeting last Tuesday night. The request was made because the Central YMCA's Camp Nawakwa has been burned beyond use.

The Junior Citizens Camp provides camping periods for approximately 300 Greensboro boys who otherwise would not be able to attend any camp. The funds are raised by the Greensboro Daily News in an annual drive.

Some time ago, the Cone Memorial YMCA board, with Raymond Kincaid, president, designated that the Camp Herman Recreation Center committee, Colvin Williamson, chairman, make a study of the request and a plan of cooperation with the Central YMCA.

This year, for the first time, the Junior Citizens' group will include some boys from the Cone Mills area. Camping periods will begin about the middle of June and last until the Cone Mills vacation time. Before and after the Junior Citizens' camping periods the area will operate as it did last summer, as a recreation center for Cone Mills employees and their families.

During the time that the citizenship camp is in operation, Cone Mills employees and their families will use for recreation the Louise Park area across the lake from the camp.

Cone Memorial YMCA staff members will work in close cooperation with the Central YMCA camp committee in selecting the boys to attend the Junior Citizens' Camp

A Great Tradition

In almost every corner of the earth, the Red Cross is recognized as a symbol of the good neighbor. It may represent you — through your membership — in helping other people in time of trouble. Or it may represent warm-hearted people, whom you do not know, rallying to your aid in an emergency.

There was a time in our early history when people counted entirely on direct help from their neighbors or close relatives to see them through periods of misfortune. Our way of life stems largely from that personal, across-the-fence sharing of adversity.

Today life is more complex. Many of us live in the impersonal atmosphere of great cities. Much of our population shifts back and forth across the country, hardly finding time to get acquainted with new neighbors. The protective unity of families is weakened as individual members scatter from the home community.

But people have not changed. In time of trouble, they need assurance that they are not alone. To help provide this assurance, millions of Americans turn to their Red Cross. Because they join and serve, they are able to extend a friendly hand to those who most need help.

WHAT LOWER TARIFFS MEAN TO YOU

Foreign textiles sold in our United States in 1954 set a 30-year record! Congress is now considering a plan to cut our protective tariff even further...Inviting more foreign imports.

We can't compete with textile workers who are paid 13¢ an hour. U. S. tariffs help to equalize the 10-to-1 wage cost odds against us... lowering tariffs will raise these odds.

W. O. Community Club To Have Crafts

Regular meeting of the White Oak Community Club will be held Monday night March 21, at 7:30 in the Ladies Social room of the White Oak YMCA.

This Sunday the Cone Lodge, 158 will have a paper drive beginning at 1:00 p.m. Trucks will pick up magazines and newspapers from curbs and all are urged to have these out by 1:00 o'clock.

All local communities will be canvassed including Bessemer, McAdoo Heights and Rankin. Proceeds from the drive go to charity.

Employee's Daughter To Serve In Japan As Music Teacher

The following is a reprint of the feature story on Miss Charlotte Alston, daughter of Revolution employee Ernest Alston and Mrs. Alston, which ran in last Sunday's Greensboro Daily News:

"The seed of an idea to serve mankind will come to full flower soon for Charlotte Alston, 1954 Bennett College graduate of this city who left Friday on the first leg of a trip which will take her to Hiroshima, Japan, for three years of missionary services as a teacher under the auspices of the Methodist Church.

"I don't know just when the idea struck me," said Miss Alston, an accomplished organist, "because as far back as I can remember, I have had a desire to do missionary work. I had first thought of India because I had some idea of the need there as a result of my reading and listening to various speakers who have returned from that country.

"However, when the Board of Missions of the Methodist Church suggested that possibly the need was as great or greater in Japan, I could not raise any objection to being sent there.

"The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Alston of 1905 Water Street, Miss Alston is one of a family of eight children—five sisters and two brothers. She is the seventh child. Two of her sisters are also graduates of Bennett — Mrs. Pauline Darnell, a Greensboro teacher, and Mrs. Myrtle Weeks, (Continued on page 4)

Our Hat's Off

The growing need for technical knowledge and scientific methods in the operation of textile plants has become increasingly evident during the past quarter of a century.

In fact, Gen. Georges F. Doriot, former Brigadier General who was in charge of Research and Development for the Quartermaster Corps during World War II, was recently unduly critical of the textile industry for its backwardness. Even though we do not agree with the Professor, we are convinced that even if business conditions in the textile industry were normal at this time, there is a growing need for greater skill and knowledge in the operation of plants. Such an improvement involves both management and operators within the plant. It is important that a plant determine the best methods and system for improved efficiency and quality.

Because of that reason we heartily endorse our vocational classes, for those who attend have an opportunity to improve their knowledge and develop better techniques.

At this time of the year when some of our vocational classes come to an end, we pay tribute to those who attend and those who instruct. We hope that training of this type can be expanded in and out of the plants as we are convinced that it pays dividends to all concerned. Our hats are off to our vocational classes!

LISTEN AMERICANS!

... by Dr. George S. Benson
 DIRECTOR - NATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM
 Searcy, Arkansas

One day at Plymouth Colony, in 1623, something happened that ought to be enshrined in the memory of every American citizen, generation after generation. It was the beginning of the American economic system based on private ownership of property and individual responsibility.

In the beginning at Plymouth Colony parcels of land were assigned each colonist in the name of King James of England. All the produce went into the central storehouse. And from this storehouse equal shares of everything were doled out to the colonists.

For about a year the rugged communal life provided the bare needs. But some of the less industrious colonists began to shirk when they found that no matter how little they worked and produced on their land they still got an equal share from the storehouse.

In time the hard working colonists rebelled at supporting these lazy ones; they too, began to lean on their plows and sit in the tree shade at the edge of the field. Stores of foodstuffs dwindled. When Plymouth Colony was two years old, starvation threatened. No man could benefit by his own produce or feed his own family. It all had to go to the central storehouse; and when divided up equally, it would not sustain the Colony's life because there were too many shirkers.

The Colony leaders suggested that the parcels of land be given to each family and that each family have full ownership rights to all it produced. The lazy ones opposed this arrangement, but common sense and the strong impulse for individual freedom prevailed. Private ownership of property became the fundamental base of the new world's economic system. And with it came freedom.

The fields of Plymouth Colony blossomed. At the autumn harvest of 1623, Governor William Bradford of Plymouth Colony proclaimed "Thanksgiving unto God."

Americans will not vote themselves out of freedom with their eyes open. But with their eyes half open they can be fooled, and bit by bit the right of private ownership can be pulled gently away from them. We must examine carefully every move toward "public ownership" of anything. In most cases it carries civilization back toward the stagnation of primitive communism.

A Cake of Company Elegance

Apple Sauce Filled Spice Cake

YOU'LL HAVE FUN making this cake. It turns out high and proud, rich and handsome—a cake of company elegance. Even if you never baked a cake before in your life, you can make this one and have it a delight to serve . . . to guests any time . . . to the family whenever the mood strikes you.

Item one—the spice cake itself is a packaged cake-mix. No problem there. Item two—that deep and luscious filling is canned apple sauce which you can buy in any grocery store. The apple sauce lends a delicate moistness and keeping quality to the cake as well as that good apple flavor. Item three—the frosting is a simple brown sugar froth knifed on in thick swirls. Result—a real stand-up beauty of a cake that's downright delectable eating.

APPLE SAUCE FILLED SPICE CAKE

1 pkg. spice cake mix 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 1 cup canned apple sauce 2 tablespoons cornstarch
 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind 1 teaspoon Sugar Frosting

Bake spice cake according to directions on package. Cool layers. Combine apple sauce, lemon rind and juice. Soften cornstarch in a little cold water; add to apple sauce. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Cool; spread between layers. Frost top and sides of cake with frosting.

BROWN SUGAR FROSTING

1½ cups firmly packed brown sugar 2 egg whites
 ½ cup water Few grains salt
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Boil together sugar and water to 240° F. (or when small quantity dropped in cold water forms semi-firm ball). Beat egg whites stiff; gradually add syrup, beating constantly, until frosting holds shape. Add salt and vanilla extract.

Health For All

Storm Warning

When Carol, Edna, and Hazel were invading the East Coast last fall, scientists were able to plot their probable behavior and warn the public to take precautions against the hurricanes. With equal care, scientists have been watching the advance of another threat to our safety: Type A influenza.

Beginning with an outbreak in Australia last summer, Type A has followed a pattern which could bring it to the United States this winter. It may not appear at all, but doctors are on the alert.

We need not fear a disastrous epidemic such as struck this country in 1918. Many of the deaths then were the result of pneumonia or meningitis that developed following the "flu." New antibiotics and other drugs will cut down these secondary infections. Prompt treatment and careful nursing through convalescence will also help prevent complications.

If influenza does strike in your community, avoid crowds. The "flu" virus is spread by direct contact, but it can be carried and passed on by people who are not sick themselves. Watch for symptoms. If any member of the family complains of sore throat, cough, headache, fever, or nausea, put him to bed at once. Influenza moves fast to the acute stage when there may be severe pains in the back, chest and limbs, and exhaustion to the point of prostration.

Follow the doctor's instructions carefully. There is no specific cure for influenza but the discomfort can be relieved and dangerous complications prevented. Lots of rest and a gradual return to normal activity are of the utmost importance in coming safely through influenza.

Christianity has not been tried and found wanting; it has been found difficult and not tried.

When they cast thee down thou shalt say, There is lifting up.—Job 22, 29.

Others may be their acts cast down. But we will not stay down unless we ourselves will it by harboring negative, depressing thoughts. The glory is that, through God's help, through faith, we can raise ourselves and stay up.

Hairdos This Season Are Short And Curved

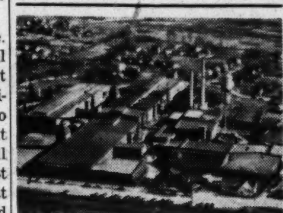

You'll look younger this Season. And you'll look more glamorous. That's what we're told by such hair style experts as Katharine Potter, who heads the beauty and grooming department for Procter & Gamble.

New hairdos are responsible. They've never been more youthful or easier to wear. And they don't look juvenile. They have a sauciness and dignity that's suited to any age... and a flexibility that makes them individually yours. All new hairdos are short, though not as short as the styles worn last year... says Miss Potter... and they have motion. They're almost waves... but not quite. They're almost curled, but not quite. The hair has a curve that looks like you were born with it, but it doesn't curl in the tight pattern of a conventional permanent. You need a permanent, of course, to make the half-curl stay... but a new kind of permanent that is turned in pin curls. It's called Pin-It. With it you apply the lotion to your hair after it's rolled up in pin curls. The result is so natural, it doesn't look like a permanent at all. But your hair doesn't straighten out in the rain, and hairsettings after a shampoo last.

Miss Potter says that any short hairdo that needs only a small amount of curl can be made permanent in this way. If you like tight ringlet curls, a conventional permanent will probably suit you better. But the Pin-It wave gives just the amount of curl new hairdos call for.

One seasonal coiffure that's fun to wear and that makes everyone who tries it look fresher and more youthful is a modified Italian-do. It's short, but smooth, brushed back from the face in loose, natural looking waves, with curved ends turned forward at the ears. It has more dignity than the egg-beater look of last year's Italian cut.

Thoughts On The Business Of Life

It is nothing to give pension and cottage to the widow who has lost her son; it is nothing to give food and medicine to the workman who has broken his arm, or the decrepit woman wasting in sickness. But it is something to use your time and strength to war with the waywardness and thoughtlessness of mankind; to keep the erring workman in your service till you have made him an unerring one, and to direct your fellow-merchant to the opportunity which his judgment would have lost.—John Ruskin.

The abundant life of which we have heard so much recently does not come to those who have all obstacles removed from their paths by others. It develops from within and is rooted in strong mental and moral fiber. To look to government to supply all material safeguards is to sound the doom of the great American tradition. If America is to go forward, we must develop in our colleges ideals of courage, industry, and independence.—William Mather Lewis

Men who pay whole-hearted attention to business, who train themselves, who develop every power to the full, are favored by the ill-training of the average man. Despite our boasted institutions of learning, most men are only half-educated, have no clear purpose in life or little real ambition, and are not honest in the highest meaning of the word. The only wonder is that well-trained, honest, ambitious, creative men do not forge to the front more rapidly.—Darwin P. Kingsley

The educated man is a man with certain subtle spiritual qualities which make him calm in adversity, happy when alone, just in his dealings, rational and sane in the fullest meaning of that word in all the affairs of life.—Ramsay MacDonald

Capacity never lacks opportunity. It cannot remain undischarged because it is sought by too many anxious to use it.—Cochran

In the business of life, Man is the only product. And there is only one direction in which man can possibly develop if he is to make a better living or yield a bigger dividend to himself, to his race, to nature or to God. He must grow in knowledge, wisdom, kindness and understanding.—V. C. Kitchen

Men are more important than tools. If you don't believe so, put a good tool into the hands of a poor workman.—John J. Berner

When enthusiasm is inspired by reason; controlled by caution; sound in theory; practical in application; reflects confidence; spreads good cheer; raises morale; inspires associates; arouses loyalty, and laughs at adversity, it is beyond price.—Coleman Cox

"A Gap In The Wall Of The Red Hell"

Recently a letter penetrated Communist censorship and reached the West from Red-run Hungary. It was addressed to Radio Free Europe, that hard-hitting network we support through Crusade for Freedom. The Hungarian who wrote it had heard over R.F.E. of the 80 American Crusade leaders sent to Munich, Berlin and Paris for a first-hand glimpse of Radio Free Europe's operation.

"We send our loving greetings from behind the Iron Curtain to the leaders of the Crusade for Freedom," the letter said. "You have helped us from being completely cut off from the Western world. You have made a gap in the wall of the Red hell. By this you have given us hope and self-confidence and made it easier for us to bear the terrors of Red tyranny which have been forced upon us."

"At this very moment I hear over Radio Free Europe that the balloons have again started towards Hungary."

These are Crusade for Freedom balloons. During three Summer months in 1954, they dropped 52 million anti-Soviet leaflets on Czechoslovakia alone. The balloons now reach Hungary as well. The American civic leaders, who represented some 45 million American organizational members, themselves sent ballooned messages of hope and encouragement aloft while in Germany.

"We also greet them," the Hungarian letter says of the leaflets. "They bring with them the message of the Free World—faith and hope for a more beautiful and better world. But they also bring the inevitable fall of Communist imperialism."

This sums up pretty well why Radio Free Europe is important. Here's a way that we can fight Communism in its own backyard—through the Crusade for Freedom. Let's back the 1955 Crusade all the way by sending our "Truth Dollars" to Crusade for Freedom c/o your local postmaster.

DOGS

by Fred Manning

Prescription: One Dog

The partnership between man and dog seems to have been a profitable one for both sides all through the centuries. Man has employed the dog in many ways and in return rewarded him with food and shelter and taken him into his home as a pet. The dog has kept his part of the bargain by pouring forth love, devotion and faithfulness in equal parts and becoming man's best friend. But a dog can do far more for man than just being a pal, according to Bernice Jenkins of the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette — he can be the perfect cure-all for modern ills.

A dog is a three-part prescription that Miss Jenkins guarantees will produce positive results. Her advice is "If you are worried, run-down, listless can't sleep nights, or worse still suffer from nightmares and don't have a dog, get one. Take a few minutes each day to train him the way you want him to be. Keep him in good health and well-groomed. Then, tell him about yourself and what is bothering you. He won't tell tales, he will listen with soulful eyes, lick your hand, whimper a little to let you know that it will turn out all right; he will snuggle close to you as though he felt you needed a little extra dog-kindness in this dark moment."

Miss Jenkins claims if you take a dose of this prescription you'll feel the difference in ten days. "Your heart will lift, up, your eyes will light up, your friends won't know you," she says. "Just sit with your dog a few minutes, talk things out and soon the sun begins to shine again. Worries and frustrations begin to fade away. Your whole being calms down and once again you are able to face this fast-moving world with all of its complexities."

Most Of Us Play 3 Roles

Since we enjoy the highest standard of living in the world, all of us want to make certain that any changes which are made in our business system will increase this standard, not decrease it.

In addition, we want to be sure that whatever changes are made will benefit us in the three roles that most of us play—1. As producers: in working for a living, each of us helps to produce a product or a service. 2. As customers: we all buy products and services produced by others. 3. As savers: most of us put something aside in bank accounts, insurance policies, bonds, or in business enterprises.

As producers we want to earn all we can. But as customers we want lower prices, more for our money. And as savers we want a high return as we can get on our savings and investments.

Calypso

A new and fascinating card game called Calypso, just arrived in this country from England, is causing a stir in American social circles. Fashion experts say the smart hostess is inviting her friends in for Calypso this Spring instead of for Canasta. (This game, by the way, is not even distantly related to Canasta.)

Calypso, as intriguing as the folk music of Trinidad, was conceived on that romantic isle by a British airline executive who took it along to England on a visit. There it quickly became the rage after its introduction last September. Calypso hopped back across the Atlantic to invade the United States early this year and now promises to become the greatest news in card games since Canasta swept the country in the late Forties.

Calypso has two unique "firsts": it is the first card game in which four decks of cards are shuffled together to form one giant pack; and it is the first in which each player has his own personal trump suit.

Although four decks are required, a player holds no more than thirteen at a time, as in Bridge. A Calypso game consists of four deals, with 52 cards in each deal, and takes no more than twenty to thirty minutes to complete.

Each player has his own trump suit throughout four hands of the game. This "personal" trump is determined at the beginning of the game by drawing and is not altered by the cards received in any of the deals. If the player, drawing the highest card chooses Spades, his partner sits opposite and gets Hearts. Their opponents, of course, get Diamonds and Clubs. But no suit ranks any higher than another.

A remarkable feature of the game is that a player whose personal trump throughout a game is Spades may often find himself with absolutely no Spades as he sorts a new hand.

Although it resembles Bridge in that tricks are taken, there is no "bidding" and no dummy. The number of tricks captured has little significance and they are frequently broken up in the process of forming Calypsos. All four players play every hand.

The player at the dealer's left leads any card he wishes and the play goes right along from there. Each player must follow the suit that was led, if he can. If he has no card in the suit led, he may trump or discard.

Object of the game is to win tricks, especially tricks that contain cards which help build your own or your partner's Calypsos. You can build a Calypso (a complete sequence from the ace down to the deuce in your personal trump suit) only from cards taken in tricks by you or your partner. Completed Calypsos bring bonus and the partners with the highest score win the game.

Card experts who have played the game maintain that Calypso combines a pleasant balance of luck and skill, that it is easy to learn, and that it offers considerable opportunities for defensive play. The latter, they say, always makes a successful card game.

You can play Calypso with any four complete decks of cards you have around the house. No Jokers are needed. However, there are special Calypso sets available in most stores. These contain four matching packs of cards, a diagram called a Calypso Square, some Suit Indicators which help a player keep track of his cards in the face of the game's freak distribution, a Calypso score pad, and a rules booklet.

If you would like a free, pocket-sized leaflet which tells you "How to Play Calypso," you may obtain one by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Playing Cards, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17.

of pints of blood freely given through the Red Cross for those who would die without it. We see it when a New England fisherman who lost his boat in a hurricane is given another so he can earn a living for his family. We see it in emergency help to the family of a serviceman who is away from home.

When the Red Cross answers the call of those in need, Americans keep alive one of our great traditions—friendly, neighborly help to our fellow men.

International Status of Red Cross—"Tutti Fratelli" (All men are brothers) was the cry of Henri Dunant on the battlefield at Solferino in 1859. Today there are more natural Red Cross Societies than there are countries represented in the United Nations. The Red Cross on six continents in 71 countries keeps alive Dunant's cry.

Helping People To Help Themselves—The Red Cross follows Lincoln's advice that the government should not do for people what they can better do themselves. In a disaster, the Red Cross procedure is to grant assistance on a basis of needs beyond those that can be met from a family's initiative and resources.

For Better Schools

Any thriving business has long-range plans as well as short-term projects. One of the nation's biggest businesses—education—has to take the long look as well as plan for the next school term.

In making long-term plans for business, the owners have to know what the plans are going to cost and how they're going to get the money to pay for them. The same holds true for our schools.

And that's where the trouble starts. On the one hand, Americans are demanding more and better public services: more and better police and fire protection, better sewage disposal, more highways, more education and welfare programs, more assistance for commerce and agriculture, more national defense.

On the other hand, there has been mounting public opposition to the inevitably higher tax rates that accompany more and better services.

An school taxes present one of the few opportunities for citizens to say a direct "no" to more taxes.

The best solution to this dilemma is for citizens to understand the cost of education, where the dollars go, how much more is needed, and where the money comes from. Only then can communities answer the question of how they're going to pay for their schools in the decade ahead.

The National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools, a non-profit corporation to arouse interest in the solution of school problems, has just published a booklet that will be helpful to any community looking for a long-term solution. This booklet, "How Do We Pay For Schools?" is available free from the Commission at 2 West 45th Street, New York 36, N. Y.

Unless we want to deny an education to some of our children or lower the standards for most of them, the financial problems of our schools will have to be solved. If representative groups of citizens will look at the problems objectively and factually, they may be able to turn the present deficit into opportunity for all our children—tomorrow's leaders.

AMERICA BY 1975

America by 1975 will have a college-age population in excess of 14,000,000, according to a report from the National Association of Manufacturers.

The NAM cites a study published by The Committee on Special Projects for the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admission Officers titled "College Age Population Trends: 1940-1970."

This study shows that the total college-age population climbed from 8,635,096 in 1940 to 8,076,441 in 1952. By 1960 the total is expected to reach 9,273,157.

And by 1970, the study shows, the total of college-age persons will be 13,609,831.

Housewives like cooking most and housecleaning least of all household chores, according to a Michigan Experiment Station survey. Taking care of the kids ranked a close second.
